THE SECOND SCHOOL SOCIETY of Granby came into existence by virtue of an act passed by the General Assembly of Connecticut at its May session in 1795, the essential paragraphs of which were as follows:

An Act appropriating the Monies which shall arise on the sale of the Western Lands, belonging to this State.

Be it enacted by the Governor and Council, and House of Representatives, in General Court assembled, That the principal sum, which shall be received on the sale of the lands belonging to this State, lying west of Pennsylvania, shall be, and remain a perpetual fund, for the purposes hereafter mentioned in this Act, to be loaned, or otherwise improved for those purposes as the General Assembly shall direct; and the interest arising therefrom, shall be, and hereby is appropriated to the support of Schools in the several Societies constituted, or which may be constituted by law, within certain local bounds within this State, to be kept according to the provisions of law, which shall from time to time be made, and to no other use or purpose whatsoever, except in the case, and under the circumstances hereafter mentioned in this Act.

Be it further enacted, That the said interest as it shall become due from time to time, shall be paid over to the said Societies, in their capacity of School Societies, according to the list of polls and rateable Estate of such Societies respectively; which shall, when such payment shall be made, have been last perfected.

Be it further enacted, That all the inhabitants living within the limits of the located Societies, who by law have or may have a right to vote in Town meetings, shall meet sometime in the month of October annually, in the way and manner prescribed in the statute, entitled "An Act for forming, ordering, and regulating Societies," and being so met shall exercise the powers given in and by said Act, in organizing themselves, and in appointing the necessary officers, as therein directed for the year ensuing; and may transact any other business on the subject of schooling in general, and touching the monies hereby appropriated to their use, in particular, according to law; and shall have power to adjourn from time to time as they shall think proper.

Be it further enacted, That the inhabitants or members of the several religious Societies, Churches or Congregations aforesaid, who have right by law to vote in their respective meetings, on the subject of ministry, and the public worship of God, shall assemble themselves sometime in the month of December annually, or at such other time as they shall judge convenient, and may organize themselves, and appoint the necessary officers as in said act is directed, all in the way and manner therein prescribed, with power to adjourn from time to time as they may think proper; and in any of their said meetings they shall have power to transact any business relating to the ministry and the public worship of God, according to law; but shall have no power to act on the subject of schooling; any law, usage, or custom, to the contrary notwithstanding.

After sixty years, the existence of the society ceased by an act approved July 1, 1856, "Providing for the transfer to Towns of the Duties and Powers of School Societies with regard to Schools."

The bounds of the Second School Society in Granby coincided with the bounds of the Turkey Hills Ecclesiastical Society or Parish. This parish was situated in the east part of the town of Granby, except a strip one-half mile in width on the east side which lay in the town of Windsor. In 1854 the north part of Windsor, taking in the part included in the Second School Society of Granby, was incorporated as the town of Windsor Locks. Granby had been incorporated from Simsbury in 1786. On June 2, 1858, the town of East Granby was incorporated from portions of Granby and Windsor Locks with practically the same boundaries as those of the former Second School Society of Granby. During the two years, 1856–1858, between the abolishing of the school society and the incorporation of the town of East Granby the school affairs of the parish had been managed by the town of Granby.

Previous to the passage of the act of 1795 all matters relating to public schools in Turkey Hills parish had been managed by the parish. In 1739, two years after the parish was organized, a school committee was first chosen, and from this time it is probable that a school or schools were regularly maintained in the parish, as a school committee was annually chosen.

At the time these records begin the society was divided into seven school districts, known from their locations as the half mile, the middle, north, and south, east of the mountain, and the middle, north, and south, west of the mountain. Later the half mile district was abolished and the others were designated by number in the order above given.

In 1741 a committee was chosen by the Turkey Hills parish to meet with the school committees of the other societies "to devid the Scool money in ye Town of Simsbury," and from this time a tax for the support of schools was voted with more or less regularity at the annual parish meetings.

The first dividend received by the school societies for the support of schools under the act of 1795 from the income of the fund derived from the sale of western lands, better known as the "school fund," was in March, 1799. From this time to and including 1819 the income was annually divided according to the grand lists of the school societies. No enumeration of school children was made or required during these years. But this system of dividing the school money was manifestly unfair, and beginning in 1820 the division was made upon a basis of the number of children between the ages of four and sixteen years enumerated in each school society. The number of children in the Second School Society of Granby and the amount received each year so far as these can be ascertained are given in the following table:

Year.	Number of children.	Amount of school fund money.	Year.	Number of children.	Amount of school fund money.

In the return for 1825 there was an omission of forty-seven children and a special grant was made by the General Assembly to cover the omission. Children were frequently enumerated both in the district where their parents resided and in the district where they (the children) were temporarily residing. A circular sent out in 1833 requesting that children be enumerated only in the district where their parents resided caused a falling off in the returns. The enumeration was made in August and the school money paid in two installments the October and March following; but in 1852 the law was changed so as to make the enumeration in January, so that no returns appear for that year. The returns given for 1857 are for the whole town of Granby.

The following is taken from the report of the Commissioner of Common Schools for 1839:

Abstract of returns made by school visitors respecting the district schools in the winter of 1838–9, Second School Society, Granby.

One of the teachers has taught over 12 years; two have taught in same district before, and each for four seasons. Nine school visitors. Town Deposit Fund all appropriated to schools, and divided like School Fund. Five persons present at school meeting.

Other sources show the enumeration by districts for three other years as follows:

1856	59	23	50	19	11	40
1858	54	30	50	15	12	31

Another source of income available for the support of schools is the income of what is known as the "town deposit fund." This fund is a sum of money deposited by the United States, under an act of Congress approved June 23, 1836, with the treasurers of the several states and subject to recall. Connecticut passed an act depositing the money with the several towns in proportion to their population and upon the same conditions that it had been received from the United States. Some towns neglected to withdraw their proportion of the money but allowed it to remain with the state treasurer and annually received the income accruing upon it. Such was the policy pursued by the town of Granby whose fund was $7,019.26. When the town of East Granby was incorporated the town deposit fund money was divided according to the population and the new town's proportion was fixed at $2,083.84. This was allowed to remain with the state treasurer until 1892, when it was withdrawn and loaned to the town upon a note bearing five per cent. interest. Not more than one-half of the income of this fund might be appropriated for other purposes than the support of schools, but the Second School Society of Granby and the town of East Granby always used the whole income for school purposes.

The school-houses were built by and at the expense of the school district in which each is situated. The early custom of windows high above the floor is one that has survived in the majority of them to the present time. Inside, a desk slightly inclined and with a narrow level place at the top was attached to the wall and extended along three sides of the room. In front of this was a long form or bench without back on which the older pupils sat. They were thus seated facing the wall and with their backs towards the teacher. At times these pupils were allowed to turn about and sit facing the middle of the room. Inside of the bench or form on which the older pupils sat was another lower one which was occupied by the smaller children who were seated facing the center of the room. The children seated on this bench had no desks. In most, probably in all, of the schoolhouses in this society the bench and desk for the larger scholars were on a platform raised two steps above the floor of the room. In such cases the lower step formed the bench or seat for the smaller scholars. This gave them the advantage of a back to their bench; but this arrangement also had one disadvantage for them. When the larger scholars sat facing the middle of the room each one was afforded ample opportunity to poke his toes into the back of the luckless child seated just in front of him.

The teacher's desk, whose height made it necessary for the teacher to stand behind it or to sit upon a high stool or a raised platform, was near the fourth side of the room. Its hinged cover could be locked down to preserve its contents from inquisitive eyes and fingers. The fire-place was also located at this side of the room. The stove succeeded the fireplace before 1830, the change probably taking place during the decade previous. Later, within the memory of some now living, the long benches and desks were replaced by desks and benches suitable for two scholars and arranged in rows all facing the teacher's side of the room. The present writer can certify to the discomfort of these desks with their accompanying narrow seats and straight, perpendicular backs.

There is little to be learned about the books used or the studies pursued previous to the time covered by the memory of aged persons now living. We may, however, be certain that all of the scholars were well grounded in the essentials of "the three r's," reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic. The returns made by the school visitors of this society for the winter of 1838–9 show that the following studies were taught, and show the number of authors whose books were used: spelling only one author, reading eleven authors, arithmetic four authors, geography five authors, history two authors, grammar one author, natural philosophy two authors, astronomy and chemistry, the last two being apparently taught without the use of text-books. Writing was of course also taught even if it was not dignified by being called a study; but no books were used. The teacher or "master" was forced to "set the copy" as well as make and mend the quill pens for the scholars.

From an early period the catechism had been diligently studied in New England schools, and the children were usually called upon to repeat it at least once each week. The custom probably continued in Connecticut until the adoption of the state constitution in 1818. Previous to that date in this society the children of parents belonging to other religious denominations than the congregational, or presbyterian as it was frequently called, were excused from "saying the catechism" with the other scholars. Repeating the catechism was kept up in this society until after 1830, but its study and repetition was not then obligatory and probably had not been since 1818. Saturday forenoon was the time then usually taken for this exercise, and only those who chose to do so took part in it. That famous little book the New England Primer was the one from which the catechism was studied.

Schools were in session daily during term time from Monday morning until Saturday noon, and it was not until about 1850 that the Saturday forenoon session was discontinued.

One committee which does not appear on the records was regularly, though apparently informally, chosen in school society meetings until within the memory of some persons yet living. It generally consisted of two persons of whom the local doctor was usually one. Its name, "Itch and Louse Committee," sufficiently explains its duties. The members of this committee visited the schools at intervals and inspected the scholars.

This volume of records was picked up in 1889 or 1890 by a well known local antiquarian and book collector, now deceased, in the Hartford Trust Company's building, Hartford, where it was found among the rubbish left in a recently vacated attorney's office. It was presented to me by its finder in 1893. The volume is made up as one signature of 46 leaves eight by thirteen inches in size with a stiff, marbled-paper cover. The records are contained on the first 42 pages, the remaining pages being blank.

The following is the survey and decision of Jeffrey O Phelps in regard to said line and in accordance with the request of Stad. Com. (?)

In pursuance of the above agreement and appointment I met the Committees and agents of the 1st & 2^{d} School Societies in the Town of Granby at the House of Abraham Holcomb in said Granby on the 19th day of September 1851 at 10 o'clock in the

The aforesaid line from the mouth of the Salmonbrook on the dividing line between Simsbury and Granby to the North line of the town of Granby as above described I hereby settle define and Establish to be the dividing and Boundry Line between said First and Second School Societies in said Town of Granby
